Tis to be observed with regard to the Order of the Succession to the Throne of Russia, That secording to the Last Will of Catherine, the Dowager of Peter I. the same must have fallen to the Duches of Holstein, who washer eldest Daughter: But this Princess dying in 1728, the Inconveniences of a long Minority, and the Apprehensions that the Increase of Holstein might clash with those of the Empire, were the Reasons that the sound Duke of Elders were the Reasons that the young Duke of Holdein was not call'd to the Succonfider'd, that the Daughters of Peter being only a the younger Branch, it was but just to return to the Pider Branch, as foon as the Female Line was to take Place upon the Extinction of the Male Line. Choice must then have fallen upon the Duchess of Mecklemburgh; but the sume Reasons of Stare which had prevail'd with Regard to the Duke of Hossesin, prevail'd also with Regard to that Privacia. This it was that was the Motive of the Refolution for calling the Duches of Courland (the late Czarina) to the Throne. The Dolgborucki Princes would fain have limited her Authority, and they made Proposale, which were accepted at Mittaw, but
